

Bayonne / Biarritz

La Vélo dyssée, the Atlantic Cycling Route

La Vélo dyssée now heading north, advances to a few hundred yards from the Côte d'Argent, gradually getting closer to Moliets-et-Mâa and Messanges. The route finally meets the powerful ocean at Vieux-Boucau, the former port (until the river Adour was re-routed to Bayonne in 1578) and today a very pleasant stopping point.

Itinerary

This stage of La Vélo dyssée in the Basque Country is of great interest. Once over the river Nive, the sea returns as a familiar horizon. At the heart of the BAB country (Biarritz-Anglet-Bayonne) are beautiful beaches, important cultural sites and a remarkable architectural heritage. A cycle lane takes us towards the Anglet beaches up to the ports of Hendaye.

Connection

The connection towards Biarritz station is on a steep incline.
